A Brave Irishman Troy and Atlantis One More Octupus Dead? What of It?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1928, by Star Co.

A REAL FIGHTING IRISHMAN has come to America, William Thomas Cosgrave, President of the Irish Free State. Diffident, keen, light blue eyes, soft voice, iron will, and lion's courage. That was a picture of the Irish President, for whom fear does not exist, not even the only fear admitted by his relatives, the Celtic chiefs of Gaul, who admitted that they feared one thing that the sky might fall on them.

Professor Borchardt, like many learned Germans, satisfied to devote a life to establishing one fact, tells you that the "Lost Atlantis" really existed at one time, and was located on a now vanished sea in inland Africa. And far-famed Troy, inhabited by Helen, who "launched a thousand ships," was part of Atlantis.

Also that "Pillars of Hercules," that little boys read about in their mythology, were not the Straits of Gibraltar but located on what is now an African desert.

This old earth has changed marvelously as the continents have approached and separated in a slow dance spreading over millions of years, seas and lakes being born and dying.

A new "big" oil company comes of merging the Texas Corporation and California Petroleum. This vigorous little octopus owns $530,000,000, and is nearly as big as any of the many little octopuses into which old Standard Oil was chopped up years ago. Now, the Standard Oil fragments "of New Jersey, Indiana, California, New York" are each worth more than the mother octopus was worth when she was chopped up.

Now that Britain has gone into the oil business, Americans are not as much afraid of big business as they were.

You must be big to meet a trust with the British Empire back of it.

Seven men were working in a steel caisson, building a bridge in Panama City, Fla. The caisson fell into the water, all were drowned.

Their names, Bates, Turner, Welch, Royall, Oxdafera, Sulner and Holden, will be forgotten tomorrow.

If we can afford such valuable lives in the regular routine of business, we can afford a few lives to develop flying.

An important British commission will study, in India, the

SMITH ASKS POND SEARCH FOR DAUGHTER'S BODY

Northampton, Jan. 21.—St. John Smith, father of the missing Smith College student, today asked the authorities to search the waters of Leverett Pond for the body of his daughter, Leverett Pond is in the town of Leverett, north of Amherst.

It was not revealed whether the father had received any special information or was acting merely upon a theory, although it was considered significant that he should designate Leverett Pond, as there are many bodies of water nearer the college.

The request was the first intimation that the girl's family have forsaken the belief, to which they have steadfastly clung, that she is still alive.

Although the pond is soldily frozen over, a detail of State troopers went at once to Leverett to carry out the father's request. They intended to break through the ice in several places and if possible to use grappling irons.

The search headed towards Leverett shortly after Morris Wolf, famous criminal detective, expressed the belief that the girl was slain by a fiend who murdered Alice Cor

4 GIRLS ARE EXPELLED AT B. U.

Four Boston University girl students were expelled from the school this week, it was revealed today, for violating dormitory rules and privileges.

This drastic action was decided upon by Dean Davis and other officials of the College of Practical Arts and Letters, following an investigation. A fifth girl, however, escaped with a reprimand.

Two of the girls were seniors, nearing the end of their college careers, while the other two expelled were juniors who have completed more than half of their study for secretarial careers in the business or professional world.

THOMPSON IN 5-GALLON HAT GREETS COSGRAVE

Chicago, Jan. 21 (A.P.)—An Irish executive received an enthusiastic and vociferous welcome today when William T. Cosgrave, president of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State, and a party of Irish statesmen and friends came to Chicago for a twenty-four hour visit.

Arriving here from New York after the longest continuous train ride of his life, the head of the Irish government was met by Mayor Thompson in a sombrero, a mayor's committee in top hats, a squad of 100 policemen and a throng of noisy friends of Ireland who packed the railroad station to the doors and overflowed into the streets.

In the station was a large sign bearing in Gaelic the inscription, "Chicago Welcomes You," which was noted by Mr. Cosgrave. Be neath the inscription was his picture and at one side an American flag, while on the other was an Irish emblem.

The police, recruited to quell any possible unfriendly demonstration by supporters of the Irish republic, were not needed except to clear a path through the cheering crowd to automobiles which, led by a motorcycle escort, conducted the presidential party up Michigan avenue to the Drake Hotel, which will be headquarters for the visitors.

ALL BOWS AND SMILES.

Mr. Cosgrave, undisturbed by the cheers and the booming flashlights, bowed and smiled his pleasure and then made the trip to the hotel at the side of Mayor Thompson.

At the hotel, Cosgrave met newspaper men who wanted to know what he thought about Mayor Thompson

PERSONAL TELEPHONE SERVICE

Your Bills Pay Our Bills

We need money to run a telephone business, and we have only one source of revenue—payments for service by telephone users.

We need prompt payment because our rates cover by only a small margin the costs of giving service. The loss of a quarter of a cent per telephone per day for a year would leave us with a deficit. Therefore, payment is expected with reasonable promptness; this in fairness to ourselves and to the great body of subscribers who do make prompt payment.

The costs of giving service—wages, upkeep, depreciation, interest, dividends, taxes—have been paid, or have accrued, during the month previous to the date of your bill.

To put it bluntly: We have earned the money by service given the month before. We need it to pay our bills. We expect it promptly upon presentation of your monthly account.

On the other hand, we neither expect nor want money we have not earned. We try to make our bills accurate, and in most cases succeed. If, however, your bill should carry incorrect charges, pay that part of it which is right, and let us know without delay about any item which seems wrong.

Every month we bill about ten million items in more than eight hundred thousand accounts. Clearly, this volume of business must be handled in routine. We are ready at all times, however, to give considerate personal attention to the exceptional case. Just call "Business Office" and ask for your "Service Representative." Talk it over with her. You will find her eager to be helpful.

NAVY BLAST REPORTED

San Pedro, Cal., Jan. 21 (I.N.S.)—Believed to have been hurriedly summoned by radio because of a naval disaster at sea, where the United States Pacific fleet is engaged in a sham battle, the Naval Hospital ship Relief steamed out of San Pedro at dawn today.

So quickly did she depart that more than 200 seamen and officers were left ashore. They were due aboard at 8 a. m. after shore leave, but arriving at the dock, were told the Relief had gone to sea on an emergency call.

The unexpected departure gave rise to many alarming rumors. One was that an explosion had occurred

MEXICO OPENS FIGHT UPON U. S. AT HAVANA

Havana, Jan. 21 (I.N.S.)—First evidence of a rift in the Pan-American conference came today when Mexico presented suggestions for changing the make-up of the Pan-American Union. The changes are designed to lessen Washington's influence.

The Mexicans propose that others than accredited diplomatic repre- sentatives in Washington shall be eligible for membership on commissions; also that the directorship shall rotate alphabetically among the member countries.

Pending action on these proposals the shadow of the World Court of the League of Nations has fallen upon the deliberations.

and Irish whiskey. Concerning Thompson, Mr. Cosgrave was most complimentary, but regarding Irish whiskey he professed little knowledge, although he said he had been informed it was smooth and mellow.

During his stay here, Mr. Cosgrave revealed, he expects to visit with his aunt, Mrs. Margaret Byrne of Chicago, whom he has not seen for 40 years.

One of Ireland's greatest problems, he said, is in keeping the Irish at home. Most of them have more relatives in the United States or in other countries than they have in Ireland and therefore have many incentives to leave that country, although fewer emigrated last year than the year before.

SAYS IRELAND ADVANCES.

Ireland is advancing in every way, particularly industrially and she has taken the best talent from every country in the world to develop her industrial resources and to build up her commerce.

Shortly after Mr. Cosgrave arrived at his hotel, H. J. Richards, British consul general in Chicago, called to pay his respects.

Tonight the Irish leader will be the honor guest at a banquet tendered by the Irish Fellowship Club and will deliver an address and tomorrow morning will attend mass at St. Patrick's Catholic Church before departing for Washington.

On his trip here on the 20th Century, Mr. Cosgrave was accompanied by Desmond Fitzgerald, Minister of Defense; Joseph Walshe, Secretary of the Department of External Affairs; Diarmuid O'Hegarty, Secretary of the Executive Council, and T. A. Smiddy, Free State Minister to Washington.

Coming in on the train he expressed a desire to see Cardina Mundelin. He said:

MARVELS AT WOODEN HOUSES.

"This train journey, long though it many be, isn't tiring me a bit. It's all too interesting. Those cities and towns we've passed through, for instance, with their signs of industry and prosperity. And then your American wooden houses, which I've been looking at out the window. How do they withstand your Winters?"

A source of wonder to him was the all-steel railroad cars, with their comfortable interiors and the huge steam engines that thunder westward with a long train of cars at a speed of more than 70 miles an hour at times. Another source of interest was furnished by newspapers, purchased for him at various points enroute, in which he eagerly read the reports and looked at the news photographs of his arrival.

RAPID FIRE OF QUESTIONS.

Almost continually after leaving New York, Mr. Cosgrave kept up a rapid fire of questions ranging from the population of various cities and the cost of railroad travel to the differences between Central and Eastern standard time. Occasionally he volunteered anecdotes about his favorite pastime, horseback riding.

Once last night when conversation lagged momentarily Miss Mc Nally, a Chicago concert singer in the party, sang a stanza of one of Mr. Cosgrave's favorite song "The West Awake."

Scouts Idea Cosgrave Cut Hub to Avoid Demonstration

William H. O'Brien, head of the telephone and telegraph division of the State Department of Public Utilities, today scouted the idea that President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State excluded Boston from his itinerary through fear of demonstrations.

"I certainly have not heard of any proposed demonstration against the President," he said. "He is an official representative of the British government and we should recognize him in that capacity."

LEAGUE PLEDGE HALTS FRANCE IN U. S. PACT

Paris, Jan. 21 (I.N.S.).—The League of Nations—itself an instrument to preserve world peace—may prove the obstacle in the way of treaties proposed by Secretary of State Kellogg for outlawing war forever.

In his latest note to Washington, Foreign Minister Aristide Briand is understood to have informed the United States that France cannot enter unconditionally into a general treaty promising never to fight, because of prior obligations.

These obligations are understood to be pledges made under the League of Nations to support each other if an outside power enters upon a war of aggression.

France maintains that her own reservation must necessarily be made by every other nation that is a member of the League of Nations.

Washington, Jan. 21 (I.N.S.).—Franco-American negotiations for an anti-war treaty have reached an impasse, it was indicated at the State Department today.

U.S. Fighting Super-Hawk Will Go 8 Miles High

New York, Jan. 21 (A.P.).—The Herald-Tribune today says the Curtis Aeroplane & Motor Company has been commissioned by the army air corps to build a fighting plane capable of operating at an altitude of eight miles.

This new super-hawk, as the plane will be named, would be capable of maneuvering at a greater height than the present world's altitude record of 38,4.1 feet.

A supercharger driven by the exhaust will be used to give the motor the necessary oxygen at high altitudes, while oxygen bottles for the pilots use are to be included as part of the stock equipment.

EX-KAISER'S KIN DENIES PUTTING HUBBY "AWAY"

Berlin, Jan. 21 (I.N.S.).—Princess Victoria Zu-Salmberg-Lippe, 62-year-old sister of the ex-Kaiser, today denied a sensational report printed by the Neu Berliner Zeitung that she had committed her 27-year-old husband, Alexander Zubkoff, to a sanitarium because of "cocainism" and drinking.

Speaking to International News Service from her home in Bonn over the long distance telephone, the Princess said:

"The printed report about my husband and myself are purest nonsense. Alexander had a bad accident and went to a sanitarium for a week. He returned home the day before yesterday. We are very happy and we go out often together."

"Rumors that I am planning a divorce are false. Alexander does not use cocaine nor is he a drinker. He is a fine man and a fine husband. Our love is as strong as ever. Our married life is without trouble."

The couple have been married less than six months.

Rooster That Crows at Night Must Be Bottled Up Tight

Marly-Le-Roy, France, Jan. 21 (A.P.).—The cock may not crow before dawn in this town, once the home of Louis XIV.

Nocturnal crowing is prohibited as an unseemly disturbance of the peace by a decision of the court on the complaint of Paul Gruyer, writer. He said the racket from a neighboring barnyard had kept him awake for weeks and impaired his health.

The court held the roosters may begin their concert at dawn but must remain silent until the night is over. Gruyer was awarded one franc as damages. Jean Arnaulin, who owns the offending fowls, was ordered to keep them quiet or move them farther from town.

VARE DENIES CHARGE OF FRAUD IN HIS ELECTION

Washington, Jan. 21 (A.P.).—General denial of the charges of fraud and corruption made by his Democratic opponent, William B. Wilson, are contained in the answer filed today with the Senate by William S. Vare, Republican Senator-elect from Pennsylvania. Wilson asks the Senate to award him the seat which has been temporarily denied the Senator-elect because of expenditures in his primary campaign in May, 1926.

SPINSTER IS SO, END FIRE HEROINE

Catharine McCassell, a bed-ridden invalid, trapped in her room on the third floor of the tenement house at No 14 Clarendon street, South End, when fire today roared through the house and No. 16 adjoining it, had resigned herself when Dora McPherson, who makes her home with Miss McCassell appeared in the doorway.

The younger woman, though partly overcome by smoke in her fight to reach the bedridden spinster, bravely tied the sick woman from her bed, placed her on her back, and struggled through smoke and flame down the two flights of stairs to safety, where rescuer and rescued were taken in charge by neighbors.

Six families were driven from their beds in the two tenement houses.

George Clesas led his wife and child through the flames and Richard McCarrin and Theodore Pappas did yeoman work in aiding some of the terror-stricken women down the fire escapes and stairways to safety.

The fire apparently started in the basement at No. 16 Clarendon street from some cause as yet unknown, and roared up the air-shaft setting both houses aflame.

On the street floors of the two houses a tailor shop and fruit store were badly damaged by smoke and water.

TELLS BOYS TO MAKE USE OF SPARE TIME

Brockton, Jan. 21.—J. Joseph Cooper, whose life-long friend, Edgar B. Davis has just made him president of the Plymouth County Trust Company, started his business career at the age of 14, working in a Holbrook shoe factory for $3 a week, he disclosed today.

Ten hours a day and six days a week was factory grind and $3 the weekly stipend. It looked like big money then.

"I soon realized I had made a mistake leaving school so by special permit I attended Brockton High School evenings, studying accounting."

Probably the new bank head's most important decision in life was made at the age of 21 when he gave up a $40-a-week shoe factory job to become a bookkeeper at $10 a week for the George E. Keith Shoe Co.

TAKES $10 JOB.

Oscar C. Davis, then assistant treasurer of the company and a brother of the man who bought the controlling interest in the Plymouth Trust Company to make his friend the president, offered him the position. He worked six years for the Keith Company, gaining all the time a greater knowledge of accounting and financial methods.

The two Davis brothers and Cooper were inseparable boyhood chums and have remained staunch friends through the years. They played basketball together, all on the championship Brockton Y. M. C. A. team of 1896, of which Cooper was captain.

Illness caused Cooper to sever his connection with the Keith Company and he and Oscar Davis went to the West Indies for a long stay. When he returned his physician advised him to seek outdoor employment and Cooper went into the printing business with Robert G. Elwell.

'TIRED OF LIFE,' TURN GAS JETS IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Que., Jan. 21 (I.N.S.)—Because they were "very tired of life," Bernadette Theberge, 28, of Northampton, Mass., and Alfred Duchesneau, 34, of Montreal, carried out a suicide pact in a dingy boarding house room at 1649 St. Elizabeth street.

They turned on the gas jets and died in each other's arms. A verdict of suicide in a moment of depression was returned by the coroner's jury.

The girl left a letter, which reads: "My name is Bernadette Theberge of No. 12 Spring avenue, Northampton, Mass. Listen, Madam Amanda, will you please let my family know of my sad death, but don't tell them my sins because they don't know."

Besides the note to her landlady was another letter addressed to Jeane Kirouxe at 13 Spring avenue, Northampton, believed to be a sister of the dead girl. The Amanda of the first note has been discovered as Mrs. Paul Walsh of Quebec, a sister of the man.

In a note left for his sister Duchesneau begged "Amanda" to have prayers said in church for himself and Bernadette.

MAYOR TO FIGHT FOR RAISE IN POLICE PAY

Mayor Nichols will fight to the last for pay increases for policemen and firemen in this years budget, according to reports today at City Hall.

The tax surveys being made by the Finance Commission and real estate bodies will not induce him to relinquish this project, it was said, and when the city tax limit question is taken up by the legislative committee on finance, he may put the matter squarely up to that committee.

Increases of not more than $100 a year would total $185,000. In the police ranks, 2,229 patrolmen, 177 sergeants, 45 lieutenants and 33 inspectors would be in line for raises, under the Mayors' plan, and in the Fire Department, 1,094 privates and 109 lieutenants. The present maximum for patrolmen and fire privates is $2,600 and this is said to be less than paid in other large cities.

NO N. E. LINEUP FOR COOLIDGE, SAYS WHITE

Vigorous denial that he is lining up delegates to the Republican national convention from this State to vote for Calvin Coolidge was made today by Thomas W. White, U. S. Collector of Internal Revenue for New England, upon his return today from Washington.

In his statement, which was a reply to a dispatch in a morning newspaper and which was made in the third person, White's attitude was outlined as follows:

"President Coolidge has definitely eliminated himself; therefore, White cannot be for his nomination. No effort is being made, has been or will be made, in any sense of the word, to send a Coolidge delegation from Massachusetts.

"Outside of the delegates-at-large, the other delegates are matters of concern for the people of the local congressional districts and those districts alone. They are quite competent to handle their own affairs."

FIGHT FIRE SIX HOURS IN COLD

A fire at No. 139 Border street East Boston, which caused no great property loss nevertheless gave the Noddle Island firemen a bitter six-hour battle in the cold hours between midnight and 6 this morning.

The blaze started in the kiln room of the Grant & Cameron Stair Building Company, a place kept at a high temperature for drying wood, and quickly spread to other parts of the three-story brick building.

At 3 o'clock most of the firemen left under the impression the fire was out, a few being left at the fire with chemical extinguishers.

However, the flames burst forth again and the fire-fighters were forced to carry out every piece of wood in the place to reach the blaze.

MYSTIC IS HELD IN ENWRIGHT KIDNAPING

According to Deputy Chief of Police Callahan of Lynn, El Jah, who formerly conducted a fortune telling column in Enwright's Boston Telegram, told of taking the publisher to Nahant, trying to get money from him and threatening death to Enwright, his wife and his pretty daughter, Eleanor.

No mention of the alleged confession was made at the court session at which police tried to have bail set at $15,000 because of the prisoner resides outside the State. The case was continued until Jan. 31.

Arrest of two others, known now only as "Cannonball" and "Snake," should come shortly, Callahan said, declaring the authorities have intrigues as much evidence as divulged publicly.

The alleged confession of El Jah bears out Enwright's story, according to Callahan.

The Enwrights slipped in and out of court today as secretly as yesterday when the publisher's chauffeur was arraigned.

In the alleged confession El Jah implicated Enwright's chauffeur, already held on charges, and said, furthermore, that the plan had been to kidnap and extort money from at least two other wealthy Lynn men.

The alleged confession was made at midnight under peculiarly dramatic circumstances.

Deputy Callahan was unwilling to make public all that El Jah had said, but he said that the man said that both he and Dutton needed money badly and adopted this scheme to get it.

El Jah said, according to Chief Callahan, that he and Frederick Dutton, the chauffeur, first tried to get a cottage in Peabody in which to hold their prisoners, but could not procure this and finally hired the Nahant cottage where Enwright was taken.

The man said that while he conducted the column on Enwright's Boston Telegram he had maintained a suite at "one of Boston's most exclusive hotels," and gave private crystal readings to some of Boston's best known and wealthiest society women.

Police said El Jah had been reported sorely in need of money, as he had not been earning anything lately and had a wife and several children to support in Bangor, where he is wanted on a charge of embezzlement.

They said that Dutton had been bitten by the automobile racing bug, and wanted money to launch himself on a racing career. These things, police said, might furnish motives for the crimes alleged against them.

Mrs. Frank L. Bodge of Castle road, Nahant, who let the cottage to two men last week, for what they told her were to be "conferences," identified El Jah as the man she saw sitting in the automobile which Enwright said was his.

3-CORNERED BOSTON "L" FIGHT TO OPEN MONDAY

The three-cornered fight over the future of the Boston "L" between those advocating public ownership, extension of public control and return of the old private franchise will start Monday at the State House with hearings before the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs and Street Railways sitting jointly. Eight bills, including the recommendation of Governor Fuuser for a short term extension, have been listed for Monday.

WHITNEYS OPEN FIGHT FOR TWO CHILDREN

The legal battle for custody of two children is to be staged Tuesday in Middlesex court with Higgins among a score of others summoned as witnesses.

ACTED AS PEACEMAKER.

"Mrs. Whitney takes the divorce threat philosophically," said Higgins. "But she will insist on custody of the two children. She will fight for them to the bitter end.

"I have been an adviser to Mrs. Whitney and have seen this action coming for nearly two years. Friends of hers and mutual friends of the couple have been greatly surprised at the attitude of Whitney toward his wife.

"Whitney was my best friend at one time, but there has been a rift. It came about when I, with others, attempted to heal the breach between the two.

SOCIETY FOLK CALLED.

"The children, Mrs. Whitney tells me, are with Mr. Whitney's mother, Mrs. Minetta Whitney of Main street, Watertown. She also told me the children have been shadowed by detectives since their father took them. This, she feels, was done to prevent her seeing them or even writing them."

Whitney divides his time between the University club and the home of his mother.

Witnesses summoned for Tuesday's hearing include Mr. and Mrs. Edward Childs of Lexington, W. Robert Montgomery and his wife who was Claire Miller, sister of Merryn Miller, famous lawyer; Chandler Caves Higgins and Mrs. Morton Lawrence Higgins of Beacon street.

DIVORCE PAPERS READY.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church are included in the social circles in which the Whitneys are active.

The two children for whom the Whitneys are fighting are Pamela Ann, five years old, and Russell Arthur, four years old.

Divorce papers have been prepared, it was reported, and attorneys expect to institute divorce proceedings shortly in the New Hampshire courts as the Whitney's have a summer estate at Meredith and are registered voters and taxpayers in that town.

Rumors flying about Boston society mentioned a detective agency retained by Whitney and a recent visit paid to his Beacon Hill home by two of the detectives accompanied by Whitney.

MARRIED IN 1921

Family friends said that the sudden marriage of Harold O. Whitney and Frances Claire fixed in New York City on March 10, 1921, was a real society romance, and that the present marital troubles began in the Fall of 1925 when Whitney came home ill.

He was attended by Dr. David Green of the Hotel Brunswick and Dr. Roy M. Wheeler, of No. 472 Commonwealth avenue.

The following two Summers the Whitneys and their children were again at their estate on Pine Island Lake Winnipesaukee, and there were the usual gay house parties, but friends understood that something had gone wrong.

Quake Recorded

A slight earthquake was recorded at the Harvard seismograph station Thursday night. It was estimated a 3-record. The tremors, according to the report, started at 10:50:09 o. Eastern standard time and lasted for a few seconds.

LOUISE FESSENDEN

establishment for ten years, when it was dissolved and he became manager of the Campello branch of the trust company he now heads. The start of his banking career brought to him a realization of a necessity for further education, and although more than forty years of age he began night attendance at Boston University.

STUDIED NIGHTS 5 YEARS.

For five years the new bank president studied accounting and allied subjects at B. U., traveling three nights every week between Brockton and Boston to do so.

In 1916 Cooper was placed in charge of the credit department of the trust company's main office and two years later he was elected a vice-president. For the past four years he was in addition clerk of the institution.

He has some sage advice for young men. He says: "A man can get anywhere he wants to go if he makes up his mind to do so and utilizes his spare time. All of my evenings were spent in a profitable manner.

"My advice to boys is: Do not waste your time, read biographies of men of achievement, and get inspiration from what they have done and apply it to your own particular cases.

"There is plenty of room at the top and you don't have to stand on one foot to get there."

Cooper is 51 years old, tall and slender, quick of movement and radiating energy.

Thanks to Efforts of Mrs. Westmore Willcox, Jr., and Others Affair at the Copley-Plaza Is Huge Success

SOME MAGICIAN BROUGHT OVER FROM PARIS, INTACT, THE FAMOUS TERRACE restaurant of the Cafe de la Paix, and set it down in the Hotel Copley-Plaza, that last evening's Black and White ball and cabaret should have a perfect mise en scene. In all the long and glorious history of Infants' Hospital cabarets, nothing equalled last evening's in the perfection of its setting, or its picturesqueness. They tell me that Mrs. Westmore Willcox, Jr., was the genius in whose pretty head the French cafe idea originated.

THEN SHE, AND THE OTHER INSPIRED ones having the cabaret and ball in charge, proceeded to carry out the idea in black and white, lightened with cloth of gold. About three sides of the handsome ballroom of the Hotel Copley-Plaza stretched an awning, of broad black and white stripes. Beneath the awnings, exactly like the terrace cafes, were hundreds of tables. And set at intervals round the ballroom were tall white standards bearing globes of light. With pretty girls passing here and there selling cigarettes and blossoms to the guests, the cafe illusion was quite perfect.

THE GUIDING LIGHT OF THE ENTIRE affair was Miss Louise Fessenden. And for aides she had such capable and original young women as the Mrs. Willcox just mentioned, Mrs. John Geary, Jr., Mrs. Thomas Prince Beal, Mrs. William DeFord Beal, Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr., Mrs. Frederick Wadsworth Busk, Mrs. Edward L. Bigelow, Mrs. Frederic Burnham, Mrs. John Tuckerman, Mrs. Frederic Cameron Church, Jr., and Mrs. Frederick Eaton. To the perfect setting was added such other perfect details as a flower booth, an "oyster bar," and such a cabaret show as much touted cabarets should put on but seldom do.

IT WAS MRS. THEODORE FROTHINGHAM who used all her persuasive powers to corral these stage top-notchers. Scotch lassies danced while pipers piped. Mr. Rainger and Mr. Fairchild of the Follies did their musical act with two pianos. Miss Helen Brown, premier danseuse of the same aggregation, danced; three acrobats, Les Ghezzi, did a turn, and Mason and Mason of "The Spider" electrified the company with marvelous roller skating. Stage stars are ever ready to do a kindly deed for charity, and needless to say these made a splendid cabaret feature.

THE EDICT FOR "BLACK AND WHITE" was religiously followed by the men in strictly formal attire. The ladies, bless them, followed their own sweet will in the matter of costumes and gowns, and like as not appeared in pink or blue, green or lavender. There were some remarkably handsome gowns, however, quite within the rule. Mrs. Frederick Silsbee Whitwell's beaded frock in silver on black was extremely handsome. Mrs. Horace Binney was another beautifully adorned matron, in silver and black metal cloth. Mrs. George Putnam was in black and gold. Mrs. Edward L. Bigelow's lovely frock of black chiffon was embroidered in cut crystal beads, and her slippers were silver and black.

A BLACK FROCK, UNRELIEVED BY SINGLE touch of color, set off the blonde good looks of Mrs. Hall Herrick to perfection. Mrs. Dudley Howe was in white satin. Mrs. Judd Dewey was in black and white. Mrs. Nathaniel F. Emmons wore a smart frock almost entirely of moire ribbons in loops. Mrs. Frederic Burnham was in black lace. Mrs. Henry Shaw Rogerson was in white satin brocade, and Miss Harriet Royce, in the same young set group, was in black moire. Mrs. John Homans was in black lace with silver, and Mrs. A. Lithgow Devens in cream lace.

EVERY DEBUTANTE OF TWO SEASONS was in the galaxy of pretty girls, who wore the most fetching costumes of black taffeta, with pert little butterfly bows in their hair, and sold cigarettes and flowers; oysters, coffee and ginger ale in such quantities that very handsome financial returns must go to the hospital. Tiny aprons, about as large as a pocket handkerchief, added pertness to frocks already pert. Certainly the Junior League did not do a little to the Black and White Ball's decorativeness.

BOTH BECAUSE OF SWEET CHARITY'S sake, and because she is an accomplished equestrienne, Mrs. Harry E. Robinson of Commonwealth avenue appears today in the Metropolitan Horse Show out at the club on the Speedway. Mrs. Robinson and her handsome mount, "Rex," are familiar figures along the bridle paths hereabouts. And to his credit and just fame "Rex" has brought home many ribbons, the coveted blue and reds, when he has been entered in Horse Shows. He'll be on his mettle in several classes this afternoon.

PRECEDED BY TWO ATTENDANTS IN yellow moire frocks and six in soft leaf green, Miss Helen Bayley in her bridal white satin and lace was the chief figure in an impressive bridal ceremonial in Trinity Church, by which she became Mrs. Appleton Ring. Tall and statuesque, the bride's blonde good looks were radiantly set off with her gown of modern mode. The veil was arranged somewhat in the Russian fashion, billowing out in a filmy cloud from beneath the tiara-like lace bandeau. The attendants' gowns of green and blue were brightly effective in Trinity's soft candle light

AN INTERESTING VARIATION OF THE bridal coloring came with the attendants hats and shoes, of deep bright fuschia tones Combined with the springlike green and yellow they furnished an unusual, and, therefore, extremely delightful color motif for wedding pageant. Mrs. Andrew Nickerson Winslow, Mrs. W. Scott Blanchard, Mrs. John Farnum Duncan, Mrs. Theodore Gordon Ames, Miss Helen Stone, Miss Elsie Robinson, Miss Anna Sewell and Miss Alberta DuPont were the galaxy in green and golden yellow.

ALTHOUGH, LITERALLY SPEAKING, guests will not "dance at the wedding" of Miss Nancy Voss and Guy Warren Walker, Jr., they do the next thing to it and dance at the reception. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Voss, parents of the bride-elect, have hit upon a most novel idea They have a charming house in Charles River square, where the wedding gifts will be set out. And just across the attractive square is a house boasting a beautiful ballroom Luckily its owners are in Europe, or somewhere. And so the Voses have taken the house for the reception with dancing.

SO ON SHROVE TUESDAY, MISS VOSE'S wedding day, Charles River square will be en fete with wedding guests passing from one house to the other. I understand wedding journey days will be spent beneath semi-trop ic skies, but whether in the Western or Eastern Hemisphere is, I believe, still a matter of debate. Miss Vose should be most attractive in wedding white. She has the vividness of looks and personality to dominate the sometimes trying finery to which every girl hopes devoutly to look her most exquisite best. Some achieve this aim. And, alas, some do not.

SHROVE TUESDAY, BESIDES BEING MISS VOSE'S WEDDING day, gives inspiration to the social game as the Copley Society's choice for its Mardi Gras ball. Holker Abbott's coherts do this sort of costume affair to great perfection—the Society being composed of the artists and that ilk there is much ingenuity brought to bear on costume designing and execution. Two or three years ago the Copley Society electrified the town with as brilliant a costume ball as ever was.

ANOTHER SEASON THEY DEVOTED ENERGIES AND TALents to a series of affairs decidedly Copley-esque; a new Year's reception in the Harrison Gray Otis house interesting the first families, of course. And there were musicales and that sort of thing, and a Black and White Party. Now the Mardi Gras is receiving the full Copley Society attention, the members plan one big affair to make a record for them for the entire season. They give it at Repertory Hall. F. Lyman Clark is directing head, and his assistants are Mrs. Joseph W. Courtney, Mrs. F. Winthrop Pierce, Miss Nellie Thompson, Mrs. William Otis Kimball, Leighton Rollins, and Edward N. Hubbard.

Sees Atlantic Dirigibles in Regular Service Soon

New York, Jan. 21 (I.N.S.).—Transatlantic dirigible service between the United States and Great Britain is only a matter of a comparatively short time.

Within two and a half years giant dirigibles will be speeding over the Atlantic, carrying hundreds of passengers in regular weekly service between London and New York. Six months later an alternate daily service will be in operation.

This interesting prediction was made by Commander C. D. Burney, British airship constructor and Member of Parliament, in an interview today.

He also predicted that within ten years great "trunk routes" will span the high seas, linking by dirigible such cities as New York and London, Berlin and Bombay, San Francisco and Honolulu, Miami and Rio De Janeiro, London and Cape Town, Shanghai and Lexington—in fact all the principal cities of the world.

WOOD STARTS PEACE MOVE IN HAVERHILL

Haverhill, Jan. 21.—A peace move in the strike of 5,500 shoe workers, tying up 43 factories here, was made today by Charles G. Wood, United States Commissioner of Labor.

Following a conference with James J. Rooney, chairman of District Council No. 1, Shoe Workers' Protective Union, and General Secretary Daniel M. Fitzgerald, Wood issued a call for a meeting of a committee representing the various locals.

The meeting will be held later in the day at Liberty Hall, and though the commissioner made public no statement relative to his plans it is believed he will suggest the strikers return to their benches until he has made a thorough investigation of alleged grievances and recommendations for their relief. He is known to have made this suggestion to Rooney and Fitzgerald.

Further complications in the existing situation are seen in the possibility that on Monday some manufacturers may attempt to resume business on an open-shop basis. Under a union agreement they must wait 24 hours after notifying the union of any vacancy before filling such vacancy with nonunion labor; this time expired last night.

Three hundred employes of the Hickard Shoe Company, one of the 21 still in operation, were at work today, although they had been advised to go out because the company's niggerhead workers were on a lower wage scale than the others. This early advice was countermanded by union officials.

Rumors of a rift in the harmony of the Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' Association were denied by President Meyer T. Ornsteen, who likewise denied a report that he had resigned.

The striking employes seek a return to the 1927 wage scale, which was higher than the existing pay, while the manufacturers are attempting to enforce the wage decision of Frank C. Richardson, neutral arbiter, for salary cuts ranging in different operations from ten to 35 per cent. on the present basis.

3 YOUNG THUGS FLEE BULLETS IN NORTH END

Fleeing in a hail of bullets, three youthful thugs in an automobile, believed stolen, outdistanced Patrolman James J. Collins of the Hanover street station, who surprised them in the act of robbing a North End clothing store.

The three had driven up to the building at No. 20 Washington street, North, and while two waited in the machine, the motor of which was running, the third made his way to the second floor and broke into the clothing store of William Shenken & Sons. Entrance was gained by breaking a window.

From the second floor the third thug tossed down some thirty suits of men's clothing to his pals. Then he swung out and dropped into the machine.

Patrolman Collins, attracted by the sound of the running motor, came along at this moment.

"Halt, there," he shouted to the trio. With one startled look over their shoulders the three abandoned their booty and leaped into the machine as Collins drew his pistol.

As the auto gained speed as it started down the street, Collins emptied his pistol at it while on the dead run, trying to reach the machine. But the policeman was outdistanced and the trio escaped, none the richer for their burglary, save in experience.

INTENSIVE SEARCH ORDERED FOR MISSING SMITH STUDENT

MOUNTED TROOPERS COMB MILES OF WOODLAND

bett near the college grounds more than two years ago.

Wolf, now head of the Wolf Secret Service Bureau of Boston, but for thirty years a Boston police inspector, who solved the mysteries of many great crimes, conveyed this opinion today to State authorities conducting the search for missing eighteen-year-old student.

It came as 72 State troopers, heading posses of several hundred men and women and 400 Boy Scouts, began the most thorough missing-person hunt ever conducted in the Commonwealth.

STRANGE COINCIDENCE.

"I see in the disappearance without trace of two wealthy young girl students from Smith College more than a coincidence," said the detective. "I feel that the fact both disappeared on a Friday-the-13th is more than a coincidence also.

"It is very probable that both girls were murdered by the same fiend, who harbored some strange hallucination regarding the day and date. Nor would it surprise me in the least if the person who killed both girls is today watching the efforts of the searchers for Miss Smith, secretly exulting in his crime."

Again, this theory was further borne out by a conference today between the missing student's parents, General Alfred P. Foote and Dr. J. A. Houston, superintendent of the Northampton Hospital for the Insane. They are believed to have discussed the possibility that an inmate of the hospital may have been responsible for Miss Smith's disappearance.

Dr. Houston was called into conference by the authorities when Alice Corbett disappeared.

It was learned today that a strange man has been noted wandering about the college campus within the last few days.

STUDENTS ALARMED.

The report has considerably upset students already ill at ease and the college office has warned the campus patrol to question every stranger noted on the grounds, especially after dark.

Two weeks ago while walking past the Dewey House, where Miss Smith lived, a girl student in another dormitory was attacked by a man, a friend of the missing girl is reported to have revealed today. The man, it was said, was standing in the dark and when the student passed by he struck her. She screamed and ran to the Dewey House.

Today's search, starting at dawn, had all the aspects of a military movement. Members of the troopers were mounted on horses. The remainder rode on motorcycles and in side-cars, and automobiles.

SCOURING WOODLAND.

On orders of General Alfred P. Foote, commissioner of public safety, the searching party will comb every foot of woodland, meadow and brush within a 20-mile radius of the college campus. Streams will be dragged and ponds searched.

Soon after daylight troopers took the field. 400 Boy Scouts, almost every member of that organization in Hampshire County, joined the search. Trailing along with them, and spreading out through the fields as the day wore on were several hundred men and women residents of Northampton and the towns near by.

State Detective Joseph V. Daly and lieutenant James H. Mahoney of the State police, making their headquarters at the Leeds barracks of the patrol, were in charge of the searching parties and in direct communication with them as they moved across the countryside.

SEARCH FOR 48 HOURS.

The search will be continued for 48 hours at least and the State troopers were ordered to make camp wherever darkness overtook them so that they would be able to resume the hunt without loss of time at daybreak tomorrow.

The party was exceptionally mobile as the horsemen could cover roads which would be impassable for automobiles and cycles.

The arrival late today of police dogs will facilitate the search. Dogs bench-Thachers offered the State by Charles Bolring, of Dorchester, will be used late today or tomorrow.

While it is considered improbable that the dogs could pick up a week-old trail beneath two inches of recent snow authorities hope that if the girl is alive and wandering about the woods they may be instrumental in locating her.

DOCTOR IN CONFERENCE.

Dr. Houston's conference with Mr. and Mrs. St. John Smith and General Foote resulted also in a discussion of the possibility that Frances may have been unbalanced mentally and either wandered away or committed suicide.

Although denying that his was a "professional visit," Dr. Houston declared Frances a week ago might still have been in the same frame of mind which prompted her to write, in a thesis at Milton Academy last year, that her idea of "unalloyed bliss" had always been to run away.

He would not say whether he had an opinion that the girl had consciously wandered away from college, forsaking her classmates and family ties.

DROP RANSOM LETTER.

Commissioner Foote has eliminated from the search for the girl all thoughts that she has been held for ransom, and he has rebuked almost contemptuously all who that the girl may have been an amnesia victim through overstudy.

This leaves the alternatives that the girl is a fugitive by her own volition, or that she is dead, either a suicide or victim of an accident or foul play.

The commissioner and State Detective Daly, leaders in the girl hunt, are convinced that the "ransom letter" saying that the girl would be produced on payment by her father, St. John Smith, wealthy New York broker, of $2,000, is a cruel hoax. They believe that the letter is that of a person mentally weak or one with a mistaken sense of humor.

Although nearly a score of new "tips" received here today, two from Boston and one from Washington were receiving special attention. One of the Boston clews came from a hotel.

Three railroad men on a train that left Washington, Sunday night, declared that a girl closely resembling Miss Smith was a passenger and alighted at Roanoke, Va. The Roanoke police were asked to investigate.

Word reached here that several letters received today at the girl's home in New York City indicated that the girl was alive. Other than to disclose that they were apparently not from cranks, relatives of the missing student declined to discuss them.

The Smith family started inquiry by both Episcopal and Catholic convents in the belief that the girl may have entered one of these. The girl who had been an attendant of the Episcopal church, had several times expressed her desire to become a nun.

A request that the Boston Evening American broadcast through its radio station WLOE an appeal to persons everywhere to join the search for the girl was made by Detective Daly. Daly asks particularly that owners of Summer property in this vicinity search thoroughly through cottages and woods grounds on their land.

JACK FROST IN FOR WEEK-END

due early next week, has just crossed the Canadian border into Montana.

In the grip of a cold wave, Boston is to shiver with temperatures mostly below freezing for at least over the week-end, according to the weather man.

It was a great area of cold air from the West, coming on the wings of strong westerly winds, that sent the mercury tumbling here in a steady descent beginning before noon yesterday and hitting a minimum at 7:30 o'clock this morning, when it was 15 above, officially.

At that hour unofficial readings showed the mercury down to 8 degrees above zero at Point of Pines, 10 at other parts of Revere and many other Greater Boston localities, and only a couple of degrees higher generally.

Some of the thermometer readings when the cold was at its zenith today were: Milton, 12; Dorchester, 14; Chelsea, 15; East Boston, 16; City Point, 15; Forest Hills, 16.

B. U. EXPELS 4 GIRLS AND 1 IS REPRIMANDED

Students of the College of Practical Arts as the secretarial study department of the university is known is growing roomed at the dormitory on St. Botolph street.

The occupants of this dormitory are required to sign a book when going out for an evening and to sign again upon returning, setting down the time in each case, and also stating where they have been. Special permission for staying out later than 10 o'clock is given where girls desire to go to the theatre.

The five girls in question are said to have signed that they went to a theatre when in fact they went elsewhere. How the authorities learned of this abuse of privileges was not disclosed, but when it came to the attention of the dean, each girl was questioned individually and forced to admit her part.

College authorities were secretive about the nature of the extenuating circumstances which saved one of the five girls from the punishment given the others.

sons and his wife were at his bedside when death came.

General Goethals was chief engineer of the Panama Canal from 1907 to 1914, and the first civil governor of the Panama Canal Zone from 1914 to 1916. He was appointed state engineer of New Jersey in 1917.

During his army career he occupied various important posts, retiring in March, 1919, to devote his attention to his private practice as an engineer.

He was consulting engineer for the port of New York authority during the construction of the Holland vehicular tunnel.

General Goethals is survived by his wife, Mrs. Effie Rodman Goethals, and two sons, Col. George R. Goethals and Lt. Thomas H. Goethals. Mrs. Goethals is a daughter of the late Thomas R. Rodman of New Bedford, Mass.

Funeral services will be held in the chapel of the Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., on Tuesday, at 3 p. m.

HUSBAND, WIFE, FACE ARREST IN SLAYING

decision to have a warrant issued charging her also with murder in the first degree.

In this event, the court will be asked to hold both for the Grand Jury.

Police say they believe the doctor and his wife are "protecting" each other and that that is why little headway has been made in the grilling of the wife.

FACES BLINDNESS.

Mrs. Gaudet died in Hartford Hospital. Guilfoyle lies there with a wound in the head that may cause total blindness.

The police say there was an argument between Guilfoyle and his wife during the dinner party in the Guilfoyle apartment, but no quarrel. Police took some beer and liquor from the apartment, but today said there was no evidence of use of liquor and unless additional information comes to them the presence of liquor will be disregarded as a factor in the case.

The doctor's father, John T. Guilfoyle of Philadelphia, today said his son told him that he knew nothing of the shooting, but heard a crash and became blind, as he went downstairs from the apartment with Mrs. Gaudet.

Dr. Joseph Heyman, who attended Mrs. Gaudet at the hospital told the police the bullet that hit her came obliquely downward at a sharp angle. Heyman said the bullet could not be fired by someone standing on the stairs behind Guilfoyle and Mrs. Gaudet. This theory was borne out by an autopsy.

JEALOUSY MOTIVE.

The police accepted it as a basis for further questioning of Mrs. Guilfoyle.

A definite motive of jealousy was established, police believe, when Mrs. Guilfoyle admitted she had visited Mrs. Gaudet's husband, Maximum Gaudet, in New Haven, four months ago, and pleaded with him to break up the "too-familiar" relationship of Dr. Guilfoyle and Mrs. Gaudet.

Police say that after a dinner party at the Guilfoyle apartment, Guilfoyle and Mrs. Gaudet went downstairs together.

Mrs. Ware, a guest, waited a moment to say good-bye to Mrs. Guilfoyle. Mrs. Ware went to the bedroom to find out the fight.

Then she said she heard several explosions. She went out the door to the stairs and found Dr. Guilfoyle with her husband near the vestibule.

Mrs. Gaudet was then slumped down at the vestibule door, and a pistol was lying on the floor at the foot of the stairs behind the wounded veterinarian.

Mrs. Guilfoyle is then said, by the police, to have started to support her wounded husband up the stairs.

Part way up she paused, according to the report of Mrs. Ware's account, and went back to get the gun lying on the floor.

ANYWAY, AUDACITY IS RARE ENOUGH

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

WHEN an earnest disciple of the arts has a theatre up one sleeve and no attractions up the other, it may be generally conceded that perilous days and empty nights are imminent. Just how this interesting situation enveloped Clarence Jacobson, current landlord at the Arlington, is nobody's particular business, except that Mr. Jacobson, being a resourceful young man, politely declined to enjoy more than a momentary flutter at the sad tidings. "It's a simple proposition," he remarked to his chief of staff, "we'll make our own shows."

IT was much in this manner that the late Henry W. Savage faced his own problem at the same theatre—then called the Castle Square. As an ambitious realtor of the early twentieth he found himself possessed of a theatre and nothing in human form to hold down its stage. So he made his own show to order, a relentless overhead. That was the beginning of Colonel Savage as a man of great parts in the theatre. More than that, it made him one of the first three men in the colossal combination that later threw protecting arms about the entire industry and set up an enjoyable period of order and reason where chaos once reigned supreme.

OUT of so small an item as an empty theatre in Arlington Square Colonel Savage found himself alienated—partially at least—from real estate, and thoroughly saturated with the lure of the drama. Now comes a younger man with the same ambition, same hope, and, by all up-to-date measurements, greater faith. For there is short cut by which the tyro may wrest success from the safely contained strategy of established combinations.

HOWEVER, Clarence Jacobson prefers to follow Henry W. Savage and take a chance—the great adventure. Having a tenancy of the Arlington Theatre, he proposes to occupy it with his own attraction. "Come Back to Erin," acquired, it is rumored, because there is hope in the eternal quality of a good Irish show, with music, in a community where the sturdy sons of Erin sit in comfortable preponderance and usually, though not always, elect their own mayors and minor statesmen like city councillors.

THE Jacobson experiment to make the Arlington the local headquarters for our own Subway Circuit will not sag or even falter, if stern measures and good Celtic drama are potent. In "Come Back to Erin" you will find Franklyn Farnum frisking fearlessly, while Walter Lawrence, billed variously as another, supporting actor and director—and he's a hearty gossoon from the "Ould Sod"—is expected to take up any burden artistic or otherwise, for the revived theatre.

NOT EXACTLY ANCIENT

"I wear the toga and sandals that were worn in Rome, 216 B. C.," declares Jane Cowl concerning her new play, "The Road to Rome," which starts at the Wilbur Monday.

"It may sound paradoxical to say that a play with ancient Rome as its locale is a modern play," continues Miss Cowl. "But you and I, realize that while customs and manners may change, human nature doesn't. The story of Amytis and Hannibal, as Mr. Sherwood, the author tells it, is a tale true in its essentials of modern men and women.

"Furthermore Mr. Sherwood believes that the civilization of Rome at this period was on a par with that of present day America. Thus when the characters in the play make comments on Rome, audiences see the application to our own U. S. A. The ancient costumes and settings put and to the jest, throwing the ideas with a paprika dash of satire.

"The dialogue of the play is modern colloquial English. For words the Romans spoke colloquial Latin. Can you see now why 'The Road to Rome' is modern?"

CHORUS GIRL DISCUSSED

Not so long ago Annie Pritchard, the small specialty dancer in the new edition of the "Greenwich Village Follies" at the Shubert, was a member of the chorus. Modest and unassuming, this vivacious little artiste still likes to look back upon those days and talk about the much discussed "chorus girl."

"After all, the chorus girls are very human and very much like other people," she maintains. "They have a good time, they hate hard work as much as the

Annie Pritchard next person does. And they are likely admirers. Then, too, like all other human beings, they vary according to circumstances and the weather. Sometimes they are good; very, very good, and sometimes they are like the girl with the curl on her forehead—they are absolutely horrid. But not every one can be pleasant all the time. No one, I know, could have written anything more bromidic than this last sentence, but frowns and fatigue go with hard work, and if I re-sided to you just how hard the chorus girl works when she does work, you will understand and forgive the frowns, too.

Cruze Uses Real Soldiers to Film Old Ironsides

Apparently Director James Cruze took no chance of a slipup during the filming of "Old Ironsides," the historical and romantic photoplay which opens today at the Metropolitan.

Five hundred ex-marines, most of whom had seen service in the late war, were engaged to play the roles of sailors on board the frigate "Constitution" during the recording of the battle scenes.

When production started upon "Old Ironsides," Mr. Cruze had his agents advertise for and select 500 ex-marines from all sections of Southern California. Each was required to prove his honorable discharge from the service.

The marines are probably the oldest branch of military service in the United States, being active as early as 1800. While their drill rules have been almost completely changed by modern warfare, these men proved invaluable to the production not only because of their physical and moral training but because of their ability to obey orders upon a moment's notice in true military fashion.

Olive Borden, Flapper of Films, Does Not Smoke

Olive Borden, vivacious star of "Come to My House" at the Keith-Albee Boston, is one actress who portrays the modern girl in pictures who has yet to smoke her first cigarette, either on or off the stage.

It is not that Miss Borden is prudish and will not smoke in pictures, but none of her directors has ever asked her to use a cigarette.

Olive declares that if the script ever called for it she would comply, although she admits it might make her dizzy. However, she says it would not be half as harrowing as some of the experiences she has gone through for the sake of art in the silent drama.

Busiest Screen Sheriff in New Western Film

Guy Oliver is not so famous outside of Hollywood.

There he is one of the best known of all the character actors. Because of his iron jaw and hard face he is continuously in service as father or detective or sailor or ruffian, or more especially as a Westerner. He used to be known as "Lubin's sheriff," then "Edair's sheriff" and "Khenanobler's sheriff" and "Selig's sheriff." Now he's called "Lasky's sheriff." His latest part is in the Zane Grey Paramount production "Open Range," starring Emerson at the Scollay.

He has never been a headline star. But Oliver holds several records, unique and honorable ones of which any actor might be proud.

He has been present, and here said "Bravo!" And so would Mozart to Sir Thomas' version of the second and third movements of the lovely C major symphony, No. 34. We think he would have demurred only during parts of the first movement which did not hang together very well.

OLYMPIA TO CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY

A five-foot, sixteen-candle power birthday cake will be on exhibition next week in the lobby of the Washington Street Olympia. It will be a symbol of sixteen years of good showmanship in Boston.

Besides this display an exceptional anniversary bill of stage and screen entertainment has been prepared to celebrate this occasion. Billie Dove, "The screen's bird of paradise," will appear in her newest production, "The Love Mart," a thrilling story of slave days in old New Orleans.

Lew Brice, late star of "Americana," heads an augmented army of vaudeville acts. Mr. Brice will also act as master of ceremonies, introducing the other turns, and will occupy his spare time by cutting 3500 slices of cake each day for all those with greedy appetites.

The loveliest of stars, Billie Dove, contrasted with a villainess appearing collection of pirates, slavers, the riff-raff of the Gulf, will be seen with Gilbert Roland and Noah Beery in "The Love Mart." George Fitzmaurice, a director noted for some of the most spectacular films ever produced, guides Miss Dove and her fellow players in this romantic thriller. The "big moment" of the film shows the tender heroine on the auction block, to be sold as a slave to the highest bidder.

SYMPHONY IS AGAIN LED BY GUEST

By MOSES SMITH

Regular attendants at the Symphony concerts have an opportunity this week of seeing in action a conductor who is as "personal" as ever our own Serge Koussevitzky. Sir Thomas Beecham, noted Englishman who is guest-conductor of this week's pair of programs is at the very opposite pole to last week's guest, Maurice Ravel, who suavely and almost imperturbably led the orchestra in his own compositions.

One thing all three of these men have in common (and we include M. Ravel, even though he is not primarily a conductor), the ability to get from the orchestra exactly what they want. Of Sir Thomas musicianship, moreover, there can be no doubt, judged from a single concert. But stemming about the conductor's platform, neither score nor music stand before him, shaking his fists and not a baton at the men, he looked anything but the conventional idea of a musician.

He is a man singularly free from the accustomed mannerisms of the orchestral conductor. He beats time alternately with the left and right hands. His expressive indications come from his whole body, almost from his very toes as he sways from side to side. And he is very reluctant and modest in acknowledging applause, of which there was very much at yesterday's concert.

His program, too, was off the beaten track, beginning with three operatic selections by Handel, played for the first time in Boston—and played beautifully, we may add. Then followed a glowing first Boston performance of Delius' Intermezzo, "The Walk to the Paradise from" A Village Romeo and Juliet."

The "Royal Hunt and Tempest from Berlioz's "Trojans," although intrinsically less welcome to this writer, was rendered with equal fidelity. As to Strauss' "Heldenleben," the interpretation was ... masterpiece. The composer himself, has been present, must have said "Bravo!" And so would Mozart to Sir Thomas' version of the second and third movements of the lovely C major symphony, No. 34. We think he would have demurred only during parts of the first movement which did not hang together very well.

LOOK SOLEMN, PLEASE

BETTER DAYS ARE COMING, although you'd never know it to look at Conrad Nagel and Marcelline Day in this darkest-hour-before-the-dawn scene in "London After Midnight" at Loew's Orpheum next week.

"Excuse It, Please"
Peggy McDonald, of the new "Greenwich Village Follies" at the Shubert, recalls her first spoken line on the stage. She was to say, "The King is dead, long live the King!" Badly frightened, she got the thing all twisted and instead screamed out, "Long live the King, he's dead!"

STAGE AND SCREEN

"DO YOU NOT REALIZE," mourns Billie Dove, "what will become of us if the barber business fails?" and then Gilbert Roland becomes a fencing master in "The Love Mart," at the Olympia and Fenway.

FRANKS FOR THE BUGGY RIDE furnished by Betty Bronson and Lane Chandler in "Open Range" at the Scollay. Chandler bets on Betty. And Miss Bronson causes a flutter in the youth's manly bosom just where the vest begins.

AND IN THIS WEATHER! Olive Borden, how often has Mother said to wear your overshoes! This film is—imagine—"Come to My House" at the Keith-Albee Boston.

NEVER BUY A DIAMOND on a Sund-ay. It is bound to be a false notion. Julia Faye Gordon gives Charlie Rogers some good advice anew to get along in a hard and merciless world. "Wing" at the Tremont.

ONLY YESTERDAY grandpaw was sayin' he never knew a lassie who took this position without gettin' a dern good kiss. Victor Mc-Laglen and Dolores Del Rio (State).

THORNLESS ROSES AND AN ARTISTE

By LEO GAFFNEY

DIRECTOR EDWIN CAREWE was thinking—not fast like Captain Flagg—but slowly and enjoyably as one might after a perfect dinner, if one has had one. Lounging in a Chinese smoking smock, the like of which could not be found in all Hollywood, Mr. Carewe was, we repeat, thinking. So also was his valet, and so deeply was this faithful servant wrapped in thought that it was only with the greatest difficulty and annoyance that he undid himself from his wrappings to answer the doorbell which, as you might have suspected, had started ringing at that very moment. It was a reporter who, in his best off-hand manner, called for the head of the house. "Mr. Carewe ain't in," announced the valet in perfect English, "he's thinking." "Dear, dear," sighed the reporter, "how does that happen?" At this smart sally the good steward relented, for he was a great lover of wit.

ON being ushered into the Presence the young man groped his way through the smoke-filled chamber and advanced right up to the lighted cigar, dimly visible in a far corner. He then offered his hand. Admirably mistaking it for an ash tray, Mr. Carewe poked his glowing cigar end into the eager, outstretched palm.

CHOOSING to ignore this breach of etiquette, the reporter was nonchalant and lit a Murad. This took the host's attention at once. "What can I do for you, young jackanapes?" he queried. And the boy pleaded: "Listen, Ed. 'The Loves of Carmen' plays Loew's State in Boston next week and Joe Di Pesa must hear from me how you discovered Dolores Del Rio for the screen."

"AH, yes," cooed Mr. Carewe, a moue to himself than for publication. "In a little Spanish town, 'twas on a night like this—" "But I thought it was in Mexico City, broke in the journalist. "Well that's a Spanish town, isn't it?" replied the director testily, for he would test this young scribe's metta. "And besides," he resumed "it was a song I was thinking of I need music to tell this story."

SUITING the action to the word, Mr. Carewe started the victrola and the room was flooded with the strains of "Roses Remind Me of You," sung by Arthur Tuohey with touching nasality. Both listened enraptured. And when the needle scratched at the end of the selection neither stirred. Finally the host destroyed the spell by exclaiming, "What a night! It will always be green in my memory!" "I know how you feel," murmured the reporter sympathetically, "the song is ended but the malady lingers on." "Precisely," hissed Carewe ecstatically. And then he continued:

"IT was in the Cafe Abel, the Rector's of Mexico City. I was dining with friends when I chanced to see a beautiful girl at a nearby table. She was plucking rose petals from a table bouquet. Salting them with a gesture of her long, tapering fingers, the girl then nibbled them. It was Dolores Del Rio in person! Realizing that none but a real artist could stomach rose petals, I arranged to meet her through a military attache "Senorita," I made bold to say, "you are coming to Hollywood to be a great star." "Yes," was her simple, sibilant reply. "That is all my son, you know the rest. And now," said the great man, rising to indicate that the interview was at an end, "shall we join the ladies?"

NIGHT CLUB AS SCHOOL

Texas Guinan, self-styled queen of New York's night life, originated a phrase that has become historic, "Give the little girl a great big hand," she exhorted her auditors after one of her performers had concluded a number. The expression made such a hit that it is now a byword throughout the land.

"The little girl" in question was Ruby Keeler, a clog dancer of exceptional skill, who comes Monday with Ray Dooley in "Sidewalks of New York" to the Colonial. In those early days—47 nights, or maybe both—Ruby's ability, personality, charm and appeal didn't need any prompting by the ex-cowgirl hostess to win "a great big hand."

While playing at the Texas Guinan club, scouts of many New York producers "discovered" her, but her first theatric engagement was with Lawrence Weber in "Bye, Bye, Bonnie." When that show closed its New York engagement Charles Dillingham put her in "Lucky." From that she went to "Sidewalks of New York."

Play's the Thing to Make Molnar Spruce Up

Ferenc Molnar, author of "The Play's the Thing," coming to the Plymouth, is noted in Budapest for being somewhat eccentric if not careless in his dress. He is frequently seen at the play in his golf knickers and an old coat. On the occasion of the premiere of one of his own plays, however, he is most punctilious-ly appointed in full evening regalia and the occasion is made something of a rite with him. At the ceremony of his last marriage, for Molnar has been married several times, to a lady with whom he had at one been friends for some years, he arrived at the church rather late and somewhat bedraggled, dressed in his old sport-ing clothes.

Ferenc Molnar

The lady was naturally somewhat annoyed and raised her voice in protest at his appearance, to her such an important occasion, her final utterance being, "Well, you might at least have put on your dress suit." To this Molnar unperturbedly replied: "Oh, no, my dear, that is only for first nights."

The Book of the Operetta

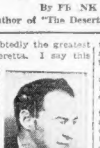
By FRANK MANDEL
Co-Author of "The Desert Song," at the Majestic

Music is undoubtedly the greatest factor in the operetta. I say this despite the fact that I earn my living writing the book for that medium of entertainment. I know my friend, Mr. Romberg, will agree with me, as do most of the reviewers when a musical play opens. The latter always dismiss the book with a smile and then go on talking about the numbers of people in the chorus, the reminiscences of the music, and the decorativeness of the settings. But only those among them who have attempted to write the book for a musical show, and failed, know how difficult it is.



Frank Mandel

The book is the cement of the operetta. And like cement, it must be used cunningly to hold the show together and fill in the chinks here and there. It is the wire on which the pearls of music and showmanship are strung. It shapes the color and entity of the show. And as a result, it is a very tricky thing to construct.

Plots for operettas are not easy to get. They must be filled with action and romance and be solid enough to carry easily a big production. The plot of "The Desert Song" came to us when we read a book about an American journalist's adventures in Morocco. At the time we were writing the story, Abd-El-Krim had just been quelled by the French and the Riff rebellion was still very much in the air. The story was therefore topical. It was laid in Morocco, a mysterious and little understood country. This gives us an opportunity for good settings and costuming. The foreign legion was concerned in the tale. This gives us a chance to insert action and plenty of it. Americans always have a sneaking admiration for rebels. Having been rebels once themselves. Therefore, when we made our leading man a sort of Riff Robin Hood, he won the sympathy of the audience.

Looking Ahead

FEBRUARY 6—

Jewish Theatre Is Well Established in Boston

The Hollander Troupe at the Grand Opera House, which is designated as the American Yiddish Art house, has become the center of entertainment for the Jews of this city. Performances are given every Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings and Saturday matinee.

Hannah Hollander, the young and versatile star, has captured the highest esteem of her audiences. She is equally at home in both dramatic and musical comedy roles.

Shortly, the Hollander Troupe will produce one of its best musical comedies with an augmented chorus and orchestra. "Gypsy Girl" is the piece.

VESCOVI RECITAL

Lucilla de Vescovi, soprano, who in private life is Mrs. Malcolm D. Whitman, will make her first Boston appearance at the Women's Republican Club on Monday evening this week in an interesting program of "Songs of Italy." A series of similar concerts fared well in New York.

"LOST WORLD" WILL HAVE SEQUEL

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 21.—Conan Doyle, whose wandering in the spirit world was temporarily halted while he wrote "The Lost World" for Watterson Rothacker, has been engaged to write a sequel.

The Dinosaur, Ichthyosaur, and the other mammals, whose strength was sufficient to turn over house buildings, will again be featured in a drama very much like "The Lost World."

Mr. Rothacker's first excursion into the realms of the pre-historic age was an experiment. He didn't know how modern movie patrons would react to Conan Doyle's somewhat mad idea. He soon learned that "The Lost World" was a solid proposition wherever it was shown. The tricks of photography amazed even those who are familiar with the wizardry of the camera.

The latest monthly check of the exhibitor's Herald reports "The Lost World" second only to "Ben Hur" in sales for 1927. For three years it has been doing a record business, a small wonder Mr. Rothacker feels. First National could stand a sequel.

THE next foreign travelers to depart from Hollywood are Marshall Neilan, Blanche Sweet and Betty Bronson. All three leave on Tuesday to sail on the Olympic for Europe. For Mickey and Blanche it is a business trip.

They will go direct to England where Mr. Neilan will direct Gertrude Lawrence, the musical comedy favorite, and Miss Sweet may or may not make a picture. She is a great favorite in England, and it does not seem likely the English complaints will let her depart without at least appearing in one film.

For little Miss Bronson it is a holiday and a pleasure trip. No one need talk movies to her. She is going direct to Paris, where she is going to try her brand of French on the natives. They tell me she learned to speak French very well. The young traveler for the first time in her nineteen years is making a long trip without her mother.

WHILE the Warner studios have been quiet and inactive Vitaphone has continued doing business. Little sketches have been prepared and produced with Vitaphon presentation.

Lloyd Bacon, who is like his father in being able to write as well as direct, is about to begin a one-act sketch from his own pen called "The New Chief of Police." Audrey Ferris, baby Wampas star, and Landers Stevens will be featured.

It will be interesting to watch and see what happens to the thirteen girls chosen by the members of the Wampas as the most promising screen material for 1928. Some of them probably will be a credit to their sponsors and others will pass out of the picture. That's what always happens.

THEY are expecting Damon Runyon at Universal City.

He is supposed to supervise the directing of "The Geezer," his original story.

Whether or not Mr. Runyon will listen to Edward Montagne and remain on the set while his story is in the process of production is another matter. He may talk over his story, give his opinion and visit Universal City, but someway I just can't see him parked there for any length of time.

VILMA BANKY and Ronald Colman have appeared in five pictures together without a single accident. But Thursday the jinx was with them. Mr. Colman was supposed to carry Miss Banky in his arms on horseback across a muddy, wet street. The horse slipped and Mr. Colman and his fair burden were deposited in the mud somewhat unglued and shocked, but otherwise all right. This is their last appearance together.

VAUDEVILLE CHANGES

NEW BOSTON—"Echoes from Spain," a scenic production with music; Harry Kessler in "Music of the Soul"; Flo Lewis and company in a playlet; Anthony Rogers in "Two Retired Banana Merchants"; other turns and films.

SCOLLAY—Jean Kenny and Vernia Garret in the miniature musical comedy "Oh, Auntie!"; "Four Pepper Shakers" offering dark harmony; Stone and Johnson in "Tangled Wires" a telephone travesty; Lemire and Ralston in "A Bad Move"; other turns and films.

MR. CLIVE FAILS TO MAKE HIS OWN CAST!

"TAKE MY ADVICE" at the Copley is visited by Artist John Moynahan and, win, lose or draw, this is the result. In pen and ink, his impressions are freely given of that near delirium in the third act when Gaby Fay suddenly changes from a vacant-minded flapper to a real smart gun-toting crook—thus plunging the rest of this harried household into just the right kind of panic intended by a conniving playwright.

Plays for the American People

By FRANK CRAVEN
Author of "The 19th Hole," at the Hollis

I firmly believe that the average man and woman prefer seeing a play that introduces a domestic problem, important to them, than to witnessing any other sort of dramatic entertainment. I may not be wholly right in this respect, but as far as any record exists, there can be little doubt that the most lasting plays in the theatre have been those that have treated of the momentarily prominent problems to be found in everyday life. Additionally popular have been those where the characters have been of a familiar resemblance to people met in daily life. This condition is especially true in the United States where comedies and dramas that have had to do with outstandingly domestic problems have endured above all others. Therefore, when I write a play I give it a domestic problem motive and, believing that people refer being made happy to being made sad, I try to make my situations funny and my lines laughable.

The stage play is nothing more than a story acted as well as told. It has been slowly evolved from the tale of domestic happening grunted out before a cave fire countless years ago.

In these days it requires much less than a decade for the interests of even the most domesticated individual to change. Ten years ago, I would not for a moment have entertained the thought of writing a comedy with a golfing motive—but five years ago I would have hesitated long before doing it. When I authored "Too Many Cooks," couples all over the country were wrapped up in plans and contracts for the building of little homes, so I took that craze as the basis of the theme for that comedy. When I built "The First Year," newlyweds from coast to coast were deeply engrossed in the question of how to weather the initial year of their marital career—hence the theme of that play.

Today, golf, as a sport, is the national relaxation. Millions play it and millions more hear it discussed daily—being a dyed-in-the-wool golfer and gifted with powers of observation, what more natural than my selection of a golfing background for a comedy to be written about normal everyday people?

New Art Film to Be Shown Soon at Symphony Hall

"The Last Moment," an impressionist photoplay dealing with the myriad thoughts that flash through the human brain just before death, will be shown at Symphony Hall for the first time on February 5.

The new film is sponsored by the same producers who gave the noted Russian cinema, "Potemkin." The writer and director of "The Last Moment" came to Hollywood practically unknown, but upon completion of this photoplay he was immediately placed on contract by one of the large producers.

"The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," sensational U. F. A. picture, will also be shown as an added attraction.

Lon Chaney Learns That Spooks Are Non-Union

Good orthodox ghosts don't work in the daytime—it's against the principles of the United Spectors' Association or the Amalgamated Academy of Phantoms—or whatever it is that governs the activities of visitors from the Great Beyond.

All of which is responsible for the strangest working hours Lon Chaney has ever observed, during the filming of "London After Midnight," his new picture at the Orpheum next week.

To get the correct lighting effects which Director Tod Browning has achieved in the film, it was necessary for Chaney, as the central figure, to be present at the studio at all kinds of odd hours. Sleep, of course, in any regular apportionments, was out of the question.

BERGER'S BEST.

Having entertained, or at least fed nearly everybody in the show ess by this time, Bob Berger—he of the waffle emporium in the Metropolitan building—seeks new philanthropies. # HOAX WITH MANY ANGLES HITS N. Y. HOME

New York, Jan. 21 (A.P.)—A series of mysterious incidents had Dr. and Mrs. Paul Gross of East 58th street bewildered today.

An undertaker called at the Gross home with all the paraphernalia necessary for a funeral. He said he had come in response to a telephone call. Mrs. Gross had just assured him there was a mistake somewhere when a registered nurse appeared, saying she had been sent by a registry to care for a maternity case. Again Mrs. Gross explained there was an error.

A short while later there again was a knock on the door and a minister said he was told his services were requested at a funeral.

Just after the departure of the minister, Dr. Gross, a lecturer at the Vanderbilt clinic, arrived home after a hectic afternoon spent in running down a telephone message that his wife had been seriously hurt in an accident.

The mystery took still another angle when a newspaper was informed by telephone that Mrs. Gross had given birth to triplets. The newspaper's informant said she had been the mother of six other children, three being sets of twins.

Chicago Payroll Holdups Lead to Five-Day Week

Chicago, Jan. 21 (A.P.)—Payroll holdups within the past few months have led indirectly to a trial of the five-day week in the Chicago building industry.

Twelve of the city's largest plaster contractors have had their payrolls taken in holdups, and have started to pay by check.

Union rules provide payment must be in currency. The dispute over the method of payment led to a compromise which called for trial of the five-day week.

Tokio Diet Dissolved

Tokyo, Jan. 21 (A.P.)—The long-threatened dissolution of the Japanese Diet took place today.

MOVIE STUDIOS CLOSE UP FOR FEW WEEKS

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 21 (A.P.)—Many movie actors face enforced vacations with the closing of several of the important studios in Hollywood.

The Mack Sennett motion picture studio is the latest to announce a temporary suspension of production.

A shutdown already is in effect at Warner Brothers' studio and Universal Pictures, Inc., plans to close its studios at Universal City next week.

On February 15 the Christie Comedy Studio will suspend operations for about a month.

Officials of the producing units explained today that the closing of the studios is more or less a seasonal matter.

At Warner Brothers it was pointed out that Vitaphone production is continuing despite suspension of other work on the lot, and that in two weeks two comedies will be started.

"In March," it was added, "we shall open again full blast."

The Sennett shutdown, the company explained, is due to the fact that Pathe, through which Sennett comedies are released, has completed its short-reel quota for the year and will accept no more two-reel comedies until Spring.

FINE 19 YALE STUDENTS FOR AID TO STRIKERS

New Haven, Ct., Jan. 21 (I.N.S.)—Nineteen Yale students were today fined $2 each for violation of a city ordinance forbidding distribution of circulars or advertising matter in the streets. All appealed. The cases grew out of the neckwear strike in progress in New York since August 1, which developed here when two of the manufacturers moved their plants to New Haven and declared for open shop. A large group of Yale students sympathized with the strikers and distributed pamphlets upholding the strike and were arrested.

POTTERS FIELD GRAVE FOR SLAIN LAWRENCE WOMAN

Hoboken, N. J., Jan. 21 (A.P.)—The body of Florence McFall, formerly of Lawrence, Mass., who was killed by Walter McFall last week after he had accused her of unfaithfulness, awaits burial in Potters Field. Parents of the young woman have refused to claim the body, it was said, and the time limit for holding bodies in the morgue expires today.

The feature meet will be the Newton Brockton meet of the old Newton High School gym. Newton has one of the best [illegible] track teams in [illegible] State. The meet at Lawrence should be a very even affair. The Mill Town boys will meet a picked team from the four high schools in Worcester. Despite the fact that Lawrence will compete against the pick of four schools, it stands a fairly good chance to win. The Mill Town [illegible] trimmed Dorchester last week, while Worcester lost to Lowell.

By BILL GRIMES.

One of the fastest and most thrilling games of the season is predicted for tonight when the Tigers tangle up with Providence at the Boston Arena.

For some unknown reason, bad feeling has existed between the Reds since the start of the Canadian-American League.

The Boston and Providence outfits played some wild hockey games last season but nothing like those they have offered this year. The last game between these clubs which was played in Providence put "Poret" Conant, Bob Taylor Eddie Carman and Eddie Bejkon on the hospital list and the Reds did not come out unharmed.

The Tigers are now two and one half games out in front in the race for the Canadian-American League championship. They are playing far better hockey than any club in the league and showing noticeable improvement in every start.

Providence is fighting to slip into the play off at the expense of either New Haven or Springfield and would like nothing better than to be responsible for the ruination of the Tiger's.

REDS STRENGTHENED.

Since the last appearance of the Reds here, the team has been strengthened. Harry Ladder, who was to have burned up the Narragansett League, was sent to the Providence club by the Bruins last week after he had not fully recovered from an operation he underwent about three weeks ago, but he has enough ice to indicate that he will help Jimmy Ward's club.

Naturally the Tigers are not anxious to have Ladder star the game and will try to keep the dangerous player, while attempting to show the local fans that he is not enough for the Tiger's goal.

Along with Ladder, Providence has secured Minor Murray from Philadelphia. Murray, a former Bruin defenseman, has been with the New York Americans. Murray is not the equal of Ladder in an end rush, but he is a better defender.

He gave a fine account of himself against the Tigers on Tuesday night, when he played with the Bruins' "Rich" Moore and Percy Galbraith. A defense pair will be back in the Providence lineup this evening after an absence of three weeks.

Fresh from their victory over the Springfield Indians the Tigers are in a winning mood. The acquisition of Leo Lacroix will bolster up Eddie Powers' forces and allow Reg Mercier and Lily Conroy, two people I do not wish to mention for short reasons, would be forced to play defense instead of forwards.

TIGER SUBS STRONG.

Although Bob Taylor, Eddie Carman and George Ledoux are not in a position to be called subs, they will be used frequently. Ted Field Hockey Director is the boy who will be put in the game between the fifty-minute mark and the end of the game. It will be the duty of Dennie Bejkon and Eddie Carman to keep the Providence forwards from scoring.

It will be the duty of Ted Field to keep the outer defense, but "Denny" Dennis and "Hi" Stuart are sure to get a chance to see the game, before it is completed. Ted and Eddie, Red Burns, will be in the game all the time and will be used in the place of Leo Lacroix.

It will be to the advantage of the Reds if Providence can keep the game out of the hands of Referee Ross Hewitt. Hewitt is a good referee when he wants to be, but he has a terrible habit of losing control of himself.

Since a series, however, would not be the amateur club championship of the United States.

Harvard also is ready to play Augsburg College, and thus the national college hockey championship could be decided.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE best exercise for keeping that girlish waistline, is to bend over and throw the candy box out of the window.

Life, like a Christmas stocking, holds only so many thrills and the girl who has emptied the stocking and skinned all the sweets before she is twenty is going to find the next fifty years just one long anti-climax.

The savage growls over his bone at dinner; the civilized man merely smashes his teeth over a soft-boiled egg at breakfast.

When a wife ceases to be a stimulant and becomes an irritant, a man promptly pushes out and looks around for a counter-irritant.

"When a woman gets kissed by me, she's KISSED!" remarked the latest successful Don Juan. But that, dear heart, is every man's secret illusion about himself.

Apparently, no girl of today plans to remain married long enough to "get into a rut" or to let any man become a positive habit with her.

When a woman is feeling blue or discouraged she can always go to the nearest beauty parlor and have her spirits lifted and her vanity recharged.

One reason why a man never tells a woman anything, is because he knows that the simple truth would be so much less thrilling than the shocking things she THINKS about him.

A man loves to "give things" to a woman; but when it comes to getting her monthly bills and charge accounts, he loses all his enthusiasm; there is nothing really picturesque or sensational about THAT.

* * *

The only way in which lovemaking seems to have changed is that today a kiss lasts twice as long and a half-hour about half as long.

Unwelcome Advice

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

HENRY is out of a job. The firm for which he has worked since he left school closed its doors recently and that left Henry without employment.

Of course, his mother is worried about the matter—not only because Henry finds his weekly salary, but because he is so miserable when he is idle. He comes home at night with that beaten, sullen look in his eyes that jobless men bring home. His mother knows by his expression that he has not met with success, but she wants to hear all about it.

"My luck, Son?"

Henry shakes his head and goes on to his room. She follows him.

"Did you see So-and-So?" "What did he say?" "Why didn't you tell him this and that?" "Whom else did you see?" "Well, why don't you go to see the man your Uncle Will told you about?"

Questions like these are prompted by her concern for the boy's welfare. But they irritate him. If they did any good a little irritation would not matter so much difference. But the questioning doesn't help him at all.

Henry is a grown young man, but his mother still wants to steer his affairs toward a successful climax. Henry doesn't care for climaxes, and being a man, he prefers to do his own steering.

There is another thing that Henry's mother tries to arrange for her son.

She is anxious for him to meet the right sort of girls. So every now and then she says:

"Son, I met a lovely girl today. She is pretty and bright, and I know you would like her. I told her that I wanted you to know each other, and she said she would be delighted."

Henry immediately conceives an unreasonable indifference toward that girl. He has never seen her, he never wants to see her. Occasionally his mother contrives an introduction, but Henry is prejudiced against the girl before he meets her. And nobody could induce him to like her—least of all his mother.

Henry is a clean-cut, good-natured young fellow who loves and admires his mother; but, like other young people, he is possessed of a subconscious perverseness.

Grown sons and daughters abominate busybodies, and parents might well recognize that fact. It is quite often the case that a suggestion from an advice-giving relative sets the youngster against the idea.

Girls and boys who work for their living have a great many problems sometimes, parents can help them; usually they cannot. When they really need your advice they will let the fact be known.

It is very distressing to be set aside by your children, but thrusting comments upon them never gets satisfactory results. Parents who adopt a method that arouses opposition in their children are to be pitied. It takes tact and judgment and judgment and friendliness and tolerance to live harmoniously with grown-up children.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY.

SEVERAL California women have formed a Brides' Protective Association and are demanding wages in the home. They promise to love, honor and obey, but housework extra.

ONE wife says she's entitled to a day off every week, the same as any other servants.

SHE'S tired of being a wife and have the cook get all the privileges.

BUT she's doing her own work now so that her husband can play the horses.

SHE says the upkeep of his dice is terrible.

THEY'RE very comfortably fixed. They have two machines. A Ford and a carpet sweeper.

HE'S going to buy his wife a vacuum cleaner as soon as the place gets dirty enough.

A DETROIT bride claims she was busy with a broom ten minutes after the wedding.

THE way she has to work around the house you'd think she'd been married by the Secretary of Labor.

SHE went to the altar in a bungalow apron.

SHE had a bridal bouquet in one hand and a mop in the other.

SHE left a good laundry job at twelve dollars a week to start over a strange wash tub for nothing.

SHE wants to get a divorce now and buy an electric washing machine with her alimony.

HER husband hopes to part good friends with her so that she can still do his laundry.

WHEN love flies out the window the socks and shirts go to the wet wash.

TURNING a clothes wringer is a wonderful experience for a bride in case she ever gets a phonograph.

IT also teaches her how to handle a cord on cold mornings.

WOMEN are entitled to wages for housework. It costs a man money to operate his automobile and cigarette lighter, so why should he expect to run his carpet sweeper and brooms for nothing?

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

She: "Was your French chauffeur seriously hurt in that motoring accident?"

He: Yes, he was knocked practically speechless."

She: "Speechless? How?"

He: His shoulder is dislocated and he can't shrug."

COOK-COOS by Ted Cook

TRAPPED!

A man by the name of Snoffle, who, according to the police, has no connection with the case, WASHINGTON — Congressman Frisby today made an impassioned plea in the House of Representatives for the return of his missing false teeth.

While he made no direct reference to the Standard Oil Company, Mr. Frisby hinted that Big Business is back of this plot to "clip the eagle's wings."

Frisby pointed out that he enunciates with difficulty without his upper plate, and that the theft was doubtless perpetrated in an effort to make him misunderstood by the country.

"Glush dipth glug wuthi," cried Frisby, his face livid with emotion. This, he explained late to Congressional Record stenographers, meant—

"They aim to cast me inarticulate upon the tides of oratorical impotency."

Police report that a search is being made throughout the cafeteria garbage cans and that a valuable clue was obtained from a dish of salad, which they are not yet at liberty to divulge.

FORBES TAKES BEARISH VIEW ON STOCKS

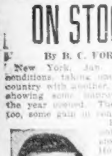
By B. C. FORBES.

New York, Jan. 21.—Business conditions, taking one part of the country with another, appear to be showing some improvement during the year opened. There has been, too, some gain in confidence.



B. C. Forbes.

But does this apply to the stock market, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial genius, admits, frankly and confidentially, that he looks for a sharp fall in stocks which have been far waved by speculators.

But in the daily battle on the New York Stock Exchange the bulls have not been compelled to put much ground thus far. One hour, one day, prices decline; the next hour, the next day they recover part or all of the loss. The net change this month has been downward, but not at all heavily so.

My guess is that one of these days, after an outburst of tremendous trading, quotations will fail to snap back.

The railroads are placing enormous orders for new locomotives, equipment. Motor manufacturers also are increasing their capital purchases. Utility companies are launching very ambitious improvement and extension programs. The American Telephone Company in this year spending $38,000,000 on new long-distance plant alone — a record sum.

* * *

Philadelphia ranks close to Chicago in volume of bank clearings. And Boston follows closely. New England isn't nearly as dead as often represented. In my humble opinion, New England is now laying foundations for progressive movement likely to attract nationwide attention.

"A billion dollars' increase in bookers' loans during the last month is a mere drop in the bucket," observed one highly successful Wall Street man, when told of the report of the increase in the securities of one corporation alone during 1927. And when you figure the increase in the market value of all stocks and also the billions of new securities that have been issued, the increase in loans, instead of being regarded as extraordinary, should be regarded as extraordinarily small.

The corporation he had in mind is General Motors. It satisfactorily has figured out that on Jan. 1, 1926, all of the General Motors securities had a market value of $2,000,000,000; that on Jan 1, 1927, their value was $1,450,000,000, and that on Jan. 1 of this year they showed a total value of $2,589,000,000, a gain in one year of $700,000,000, and in two years of $1,219,000,000.

My own information is that Federal Reserve authorities take quite a different view of this expansion. But, after all, it is difference of opinion which makes a market.

RADIO Corp. of America declared regular quarterly dividend of 1% per cent. on preferred, payable April 1.

WORLD COURT SHADES HAVANA

URGED BY SALVADOR ENVOY

the commission after his nomination had been seconded enthusiastically by former Secretary of State Hughes, as head of the United States delegation.

The Committee on Public International Law submitted its recommendations, suggesting that instead of drawing up prohibitions against one State for mixing in the affairs of another, the following maxims be adopted:

"No State may intervene in the internal affairs of another."

"A government is to be recognized whenever it fulfills the following conditions:

"1—Effective authority with a probability of stability and consolidation, the orders of which government, sufficiently as regards its men and military services, are accepted by the inhabitants.

"2—Capacity to discharge pre-existing international obligations, to contract others and to respect the principles established by international law."

Two principal points were made by the Salvadorean leader in discussing the problems pending before his commission. They were: first, his unqualified indorsement of the principle of universal compulsory arbitration. DECLARES FOR WORLD COURT.

Second, his declaration in favor of the World Court and against the creation of an American group for the adjudication of American disputes.

Dr. Guerrero's outspoken advocacy of the World Court placed the American delegation in difficult position. The United States already has stated the terms upon which it would enter the league tribunal, and those terms, in effect, have been rejected.

Under such circumstances, the United States is in no position to accept the mandate of conciliation that involves the reference of controversies to the World Court or the tribunal of final jurisdiction from which Duchess de Guerrero, of State tried to get the United States into the court, he cannot show that the proposals of the latter have been scorned by the members of the league, except the tribunal at the present conference.

Montevideo, Uruguay, Jan. 21 (A.P.)—Dr. Terra, president of the Chamber of Deputies, said that no American fraternity such as envisaged by President Coolidge is possible as long as the United States is firing guns against "defenceless people." He referred to the Sandino forces in Nicaragua as "defenceless" and said they are insignificant in numbers and armament when compared with the American forces.

Special referendum elections set for the early part of May and recently ordered by the Cuban Congress are expected to approve of votes for women by a heavy majority.

The subject is receiving special consideration now since women have come from the United States to make a drive at the Pan-American Congress for ratification in Latin America for the emancipation of women and their right to enter into government affairs."

HEFLIN MAY RUN FOR PRESIDENT; SPLIT LOOMS

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service Correspondent.

Washington, Jan. 21.—A warning of "storms ahead" confronted the Democrats today despite all efforts of leaders to "smile peace" the religious issue in the ranks of the party.

A report of a third party fight against Smith and further rumors that Heflin would become a candidate against Smith for the Democratic nomination threatened to keep the religious issue alive among Democrats. All hopes of "quieting" Heflin were dashed today when he delved in Senatorial circles he would keep up his attack on Smith until congress adjourns for the presidential conventions.

Heflin, when asked about rumors that he would run on a third party ticket, denied any such plans at present.

"I have received a number of requests, Western and Southern Prohibitionists urging me to run for the Democratic nomination," said Heflin, "and have also received requests from many Democrats and Republicans who want me to head a third party ticket. I only think all that if I did run for the presidency, it would be in the Democratic primaries in Houston."

The Democratic side in the Senate apparently has lost much of its harmonious co-operation since Heflin's recent speech and its denunciation by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, minority leader.

A half dozen Democrats have engaged in after debate with each other since then. In an hour yesterday Senator Bruce (D.) Maryland and Dill (D. Washington, had an argument. Bruce had another with McKellar (D.) Tennessee, and Swanson (D.) Virginia, disagreed violently over the method of accomplishing the same end.
